

A model selector selects a simulation model on the basis of a selection condition set by a setting device to read out the simulation model from a model data base. A simulation calculator calculates the simulation by using this read out simulation model on the basis of the initial state and the simulation condition set by the setting device.